It's News to Me

In the book Frindle by Andrew Clements Nick Allen's new word gains popularity after a story appears in the local newspaper. When reporter Judy Morgan shares about the controversy in The Westfield Gazette it goes beyond Lincoln Elementary straight into 12,297 homes in his city and from there it gains the attention of the entire nation. That kind of influence is just one of the results of our first amendment right: freedom of the press.

Newspapers are filled with all sorts of stories and useful information. To get a closer look at what's inside the pages, grab a copy of the Orlando Sentinel. Then, break up into groups of 2-4 classmates and race other teams in this newspaper scavenger hunt. After you've found an item on the list, circle it and write down the section of the paper it appears in along with the page number. Good luck hunting!

(Note: leave two lines under each entry for the section and the page number)
