fun activities

Journey Through the Galaxy

In A Wrinkle in Time the Murry children and their friend travel through time thanks to something called a tesseract. While the idea of time travel may be science fiction, tesseracts are very real. In fact, these multi-dimensional shapes are part of a type of math we call geometry.

Why not try your hand at making a tesseract? All you'll need is some toothpicks and miniature marshmallows.

Begin creating the different dimensions using the marshmallows to hold the toothpicks in place. It may not help you travel to other galaxies but you'll sure have fun nibbling on the supplies.

Intergalactic Art

Using tesseracts to travel through space, the characters find themselves on other planets. You can recreate these other worlds using paper mache, clay, drawings or whatever materials inspire you. Then, share your different planetary creations with the class.
